

Pitt County Coalition Against Human Trafficking February Meeting's Guest Speaker

Kyla Reece graduated from East Carolina University with her Bachelor of Science in Family and Community Services. As a passionate Victim Advocate for the Center for Family Violence Prevention, she works zealously with individuals and families in her community to ensure that victims of family and intimate partner abuse are receiving access to necessary services and resources. During this time, she has also trained law enforcement officers and fellow staff members in the practice of the Lethality Assessment Program, which identifies victims who are at the highest risk of intimate partner homicide and providing them with access to services. Kyla has provided domestic violence training and outreach for many agencies and community forums across Pitt county as well as to professionals across the state. In addition, Kyla has most recently served on the Center for Family Violence Prevention's Family Justice Center initiative. Kyla is also intensely dedicated to her role as a Guardian ad Litem volunteer where she serves as a child's advocate in court.
